

OLYMPUS C-5050 ZOOM AND C-730 ULTRA ZOOM
REPAIR SERVICE ADVISORY

It has recently come to our attention that a limited number of C-5050 Zoom and C-730UZ cameras may exhibit the following symptoms:

In picture taking mode, the camera will produce pictures that are of a gray or purple tone or the pictures will be completely black. If the LCD monitor (or the C-730UZ electronic viewfinder) is used to compose the picture, the preview display will also be dark.

NOTE: This problem may be accelerated if the product is frequently exposed to hot and humid environments.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q: How will I know if my camera will experience this defect?

A: Please get your model and serial number information and contact an Olympus representative. We will check to see if your camera falls within the range of products effected.

Q: My camera is not experiencing this problem now but I'd like to have it serviced anyway. Would this be OK?

A: Please first have an Olympus representative check that your camera is affected. We typically have an increase in repair volume in November and December due to the holidays. If your camera is functioning properly now, we would prefer that you hold off on repair service until after January 2006. At that time, we will repair the defect even if your product is not exhibiting the problem.

Q: I previously experienced problems with my camera like described and had to pay to have my camera repaired. This doesn't seem fair. Can you do anything for me?

A: Please contact an Olympus representative to discuss your situation.
